NDIS (National Disability Insurance Scheme) is a government-funded program that provides financial support to eligible people with a permanent and significant disability. The scheme is designed to help people with disabilities live more independently and participate more fully in the community. It covers a range of services, including therapy, support workers, and assistive technology. The NDIS is a key part of the Australian government's commitment to supporting people with disabilities and promoting social inclusion. For more information, visit www.ndis.gov.au.
